AFFILIATE KIT

Share the planner that ends day-20 panic.

Everything you need to promote the Ultimate Budget Planner: the offer, the facts, ready-made posts, banners, videos and screenshots.

THE PROGRAM

How you earn.

Thanks for partnering with us. You share your link or code, your audience tries the free demo, and you earn on every purchase they make.

COMMISSION	30% of every sale (about $15 on a $49.99 order)
YOUR AUDIENCE GETS	An extra 10% off with your personal code
TRACKING	Your own link and code, tracked through Affonso
COOKIE WINDOW	30 days from the click
PAYOUTS	Monthly, through Affonso, once you pass the minimum

Getting started

1. Join through the Affonso invite we send you. You'll get your personal link and code.
2. Try the free demo yourself, so you can talk about it honestly: ezzohub.com/budgetplanner?trial=ubp
3. Pick a banner, video or post from this kit, add your link and code, and share.

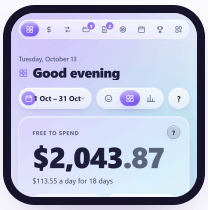

Why it converts

- A free demo with every feature, so people can try before they buy. No card, no account.
- One payment of $49.99 instead of another monthly subscription.
- No bank login, which is the number one worry people have about budget apps.
- It shows one clear number, what is safe to spend today, from the very first entry.

THE PRODUCT

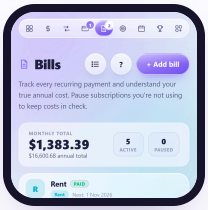

What it does.

A budget planner that runs in any browser on phone, tablet or computer. You enter your pay, your bills and a rough plan. It sets the bills aside first, then spreads what is left across the days until your next payday.

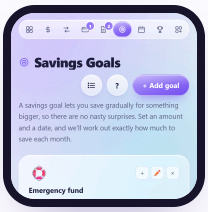

Free to spend

The one number that matters: what is safe to spend today, after bills and goals are set aside.

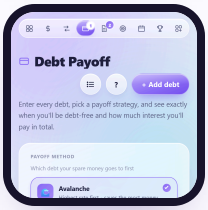

Bills and subscriptions

Every recurring payment in one list, with what it costs a year and a heads-up when a price goes up.

Savings goals

Pick a goal and a date. It works out what to put aside each month.

Debt payoff

Snowball or avalanche, an extra-payment slider, and a debt-free date.

Money calendar

Paydays, bills and debt payments on one month view.

Also included: Ezzo, a budget assistant you can ask in plain words; a "Can I afford it?" check; CSV and PDF bank statement import; CSV export; six themes; and optional sync to the buyer's own Google Drive.

YOUR AUDIENCE

Who it's for.

- People living paycheck to paycheck who run out before payday
- Anyone who has tried and quit a budgeting spreadsheet
- People tired of paying monthly for apps
- Anyone uneasy about giving an app their bank login
- Weekly, fortnightly or irregular earners (shift workers, freelancers, gig work)
- People paying down a credit card or loan
- Students and first-time budgeters who want something simple
- Couples and families who want one clear daily number

Angles that work

"Payday feels great. Day 20 doesn't."
Lead with the feeling, then show the free-to-spend number.

"Stop renting your budget app."
A $9.99/month app costs $359.64 over three years. This is $49.99 once.

"The only number I check before I spend."
Show the dashboard and the daily amount.

"No bank login. Ever."
For privacy-minded audiences.

"Same paycheck, very different month."
Use the chart video: winging it ends $525 short, with a plan $430 to spare (an illustration, not a promise).

THE RULES

Keep it honest.

These protect you, your audience and us. Breaking them can end the partnership and forfeit unpaid commission.

Always

- Disclose clearly, every time, before or right next to your link: "#ad", "affiliate link" or "paid partnership". In the US this is required by the FTC; in the EU and UK by consumer law.
- Describe the product as it is. Use the facts in this kit, or your own real experience.
- Point people to the free demo first. It is the most honest pitch there is.

Never

- Promise money results ("you will save $500", "get out of debt fast").
- Call it financial advice, a bank, or say it connects to a bank.
- Make up reviews, results or personal use you have not had.
- Invent urgency or discounts ("only today", "price rises tomorrow", fake "was" prices).
- Bid on "Ezzo", "Ezzo Hub" or "Ultimate Budget Planner" in paid search, or use our name in your domain or handle.
- Spam, use coupon-site code dumping, or self-refer your own purchases.

QUICK ANSWERS

What your audience will ask.

Is it a subscription?	No. $49.99 once, updates included.
Can I try it first?	Yes. The free demo has every feature, with your own numbers. No card or account.
Does it connect to my bank?	No. You log spending in a couple of taps, or import a CSV or PDF statement.
Where is my data?	On your own device. Optional sync goes to your own Google Drive, never Ezzo's servers.
Phone or computer?	Both. It runs in any modern browser and can be added to the home screen.
I'm paid weekly / my pay varies.	It works weekly, every 2 or 4 weeks, monthly or on custom dates. Log variable pay when it lands.
How do I unlock it after buying?	The license key arrives by email. Paste it into the planner and the full version opens; the demo setup carries over.
Can I get a refund?	Because access is instant, sales are final, which is why the free demo exists. Try it first.
